The advanced and the slow learners of the department are identified based on their academic performance in examinations as well as in activities conducted by the Department. The management of NES Ratnam College has laid out a series of learning activities to ensure good results under a Remodelling Project that aims at helping the weaker students by seeking the competence and talents of the advanced students. In the process both the groups learn to accept challenges and perform well in examinations and extracurricular activities. The Modern Teaching Methods Council has been a forerunner in this activity. After identifying the talented and good students, the teachers train them and they in turn train the Academic Volunteers who help out in the conduct of regular lectures through joint teaching and also assist the teachers in the conduct of revision activities. The Department of Political science has identified the student Teaching Assistants and Academic Volunteers from each class.
